Risk and Reward Profile

- Historical data may not be a reliable indication for the future.
- The risk category shown is not guaranteed and may shift over time.
- The lowest category does not mean 'risk free'.

Why is the fund in this category?

Funds in this category have shown a high historical volatility. Volatility describes how much the value of the fund went up and down in the past.

The smaller size and lower trading volumes of the markets for Chinese securities may result in a potential lack of liquidity and increased volatility as compared to more developed securities markets.

The value of the fund's investments may be affected by political and regulatory uncertainties in China. Chinese fiscal, monetary, legal, accounting and stock market systems are underdeveloped relative to Western countries.

The fund invests in the shares of smaller to medium sized companies which may have a more limited market than securities issued by larger companies.

The fund mainly invests in one sector within one country. It is therefore vulnerable to the market sentiment of that sector and country. This type of fund can carry a higher risk when compared to a fund with a broader investment universe.

This unit class's net asset value is calculated in US dollars while the fund's investments are denominated in the currencies of the countries in which it invests. The fund's performance may therefore be adversely affected by exchange rate movements.

For further information please see the 'Risk Factors' section of the supplement to the prospectus for the fund.
